Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L.

As long as Britain and France seemed to be holding their own against the Germans, most people in this country were content to remain neutral and to permit rather meager assistance. This was due to the fact that most of us look upon European wars as none of our making. We had not fomented this war, we had no immediate stake in it, or, at least, thought we had none, and on the whole we expected the Allies would win. With the approach of the Germans to Paris, however, and the jackal-like attack of Mr. Mussolini upon France, sentiment in this country has finally flamed to a warlike pitch. Just how strong it is there is no way of gauging but we do believe that while the majority is willing to see the national industrial resources geared to wartime production for assistance to the Allies, sentiment is still a long way this side of participation on the side of the Allies with navy or armed forces.

One of the faults of a democracy is its laggard habit of postponing preparation for any crisis until it is right on top of the people. It takes a long time for a democracy to make up its mind. Its political leadership waits upon public opinion or sentiment, rather than takes its place at the head of the column. We are not saying this in a derogatory spirit, but if President Roosevelt with all his access to the facts about Europe and its gathering war clouds for the last five or six years, had really attempted to mold public opinion in accord with those facts, the situation in Europe might have been far different than it is today.

For the President to have advocated four years ago a vast increase in the navy, air and land forces, partly as a defense measure and partly as a means of absorbing the unemployed in private industry, would have laid him open to attack on the part of the Republicans and conservative members of hsi own party, as a war monger. He would not take that political risk, and we doubt if any other president of either party in these latter days would have done so. Yet it has been proved in our history that there are moments when the people greatly need a leader who thinks first of his country and last of his party. We now have a feeling, and we would have it regardless of who occupied the White House, of having been betrayed. Vast sums have been expended for relief of our idle population, which if they had been devoted to building up the navy, army and air forces, would have prepared us well for this moment, and at the same itme left us with something tangible instead of the billions expended with nothing to show for it, and still with 10,000,000, or thereabouts, of unemployed.

We admit a certain bitterness in this retrospect, because we have reason to believe that the President was at all times fully informed of European war trends and the rest of us, by and large, were not. But we doubt if we have many men in either political party who would have risked their political future for the advantage of their country. Weighing our Presidents, one by one, in the scales against Abraham Lincoln we find them generally molded from common, very common clay.

But now that the people have at length been aroused, to the menace of a German dominated world, our President in clarion, golden tones is ready to lead them. To all practical purposes we are now committed to war in the event the Allies do not win with whatever aid we can render them. For a triumphant Germany with its puppet, Italy, will know, when and if England and France are vanquished, they will still have Uncle Sam to deal with before their world sway can be established. And, as in the last war, they have learned we would take part sometime after the war is started. That is another fault of our democracy. The vulture powers never know whether the Eagle will strike.

Curiously enough the sentence that was most arresting and most arousing, and one with which we were in entire accord, that the President used in his address Monday to the graduating class of the University of Virginia, was this: "The hand that held the dagger, has struck it into the back of a neighbor." That is fighting talk on the part of any President. And behind it we fancy there was a bit of personal chagrin that he had been unable to sway Il Duce, as he does those in his official family. However that may be, we are glad the President tried and before this world war subsides we are confident that Mr. Mussolini will be sorry he did not keep his stiletto in its sheath .What he will get if Hitler wins can be comfortably placed in a gnat's eye. What he will get if the Allies win will be the world's new name for a cheap, spaghetti wallowing bandit.

WHY SPEND CASH ON FOURTH WHEN MILLIONS NEED?

Editor, The Nevada City Nugget,
Dear Sir:

One wa to demonstrate one's whole-hearted faith in the right of free speech is to exeercise it even at the risk of being misinteerpreted or condemned.

Unless a lot of people are insincere, there is in Nevada City a widespread sentiment in favor of calling off the Fourth of July celebration at this tragic time—or at least as much of it as will consume funds not already irrevocably committed — and making good Nevada City's name for compassion and generosity by turning over the unspent sum to the Red Cross. But so far none of the organizations or indivaduals who have been solicited for funds and floats has made any public statement around which the rest could rally. It is hoped that this communication will call forth further expressions of opinion.

The Fourth of July Committee takes the position, first, that it has not been informed of any majority opinion along the above lines; secondly, it is swayed by celebration advocates who seem to feel that a lot of expensive hullabaloo, even if people have no real heart for it, is a necessary and effective "education" in appreciation for American principles. But it would seem to the writer that for their own protection and that of our country, one thing, the younger members of the community need to be taught above most others is to distinguish words and deeds; to judge a citizen, not by the way in which he makes himself conspicious, but by the way he acts when he has to choose between his own profit or prestige and "the greatest good for the greatest number."

Remember that dictators rise to power at the head of flag-waving crowds.

At a time like this, when we should all be realizing ,and trying to impress on our children, that there is nothing more important to us than our principles and our loyalties, why can't we practice acting like grown-up citizens of a grown-up land, and recognize that living up to our best traditions (among them that of a generous response to appeals on behalf of those in great need) is the only real, practical patriotism.

There are ties, of course, when extravagant floats and a lot of ballyhoo are natural, desirable expression of the public mood. Is this one of those times? Or would it not better suit the present world situation and the majority feeling about it to have, perhaps, a marching parade, some local music, a talk by one of our own citizens, a display of flags, community singing—without public or individual expenditure of funds more appropriately devoted to the relief of the victims of this most horrible of wars.

Above all, let us not allow ourselves to be led around, and our public acts to be determined by whatever persons or clique talks the most and loudest about "patiotism"—for that way lies our abdication from the principles of self-government and freedom for which our flag stands.

A CITIZEN.

VIGILANT WATCH ON BUREAUCRACY NATIONAL NEED

By RALPH H. TAYLOR
Executive Secretary, Agricultural Council of California.

Editor's Note: Crisis faces California; crisis faces the nation. With the rest of the world rocking on its foundations, what can our country do to keep on an even keel and avert disaster? More particularly, what can the farmer do? What must he do, if he expects to stay in business; if he wants to be running his own farm—instead of working in a regimented society — ten years hence? These vital questions are discussed by Ralph H. Taylor, farm leader and veteran student of government, in a series of four challenging articles for this newspaper, of which this is the first.

In New York harbor, the Statue of Liberty still holds its torch of freedom—lighting the port of entry to a nation where a man's religion, his political opinions and his choice of an occupation are his own private business, and not to be tampered with.

There is nothing news-worthy in that statement, you may remark; the Statue of Liberty has been there ever since we can remember. This is the United States of America!

But the subject can't be dismiss ed that easily. Finland was a democrack—a splendid, progressive democracy—just a few months ago. Denmark had been a peaceful, inoffensive nation, troubling no one and untroubled by others, for many generations. In Holland, when disaster came, the fields were laden with the beauty of tulip-time, just as they had been in years before. And Belgium, ravished in the World War of 20 years ago, had done nothing to invite a new attack on her liberties, but Belguim, today, is the puppet State of Nazi Germany; her farmers working to feed those who despoiled them.

True, Hitler's legions—and, in the case of Finland, Stalin's Communist comrades—blew out the torch of liberty in those countries. And there is at least no immediate likelihood, so far as we know, that either Hitler or Stalin is planning a frontal attack on America. Equally true, the United States is at last aroused and is preparing her national defense, so that of and when the totalitarian powers launch a blitzkrieg against us, we shall be able to match planes with planes, and tanks with tanks. But the war-stricken countries of Europe had been "softened up," long before they were invaded, by treachery and poisonous propaganda; by an easy tolerance of "isms" and vicious termites, which weakened their foundations—and made them an easy prey to the invader.

The United States has been "softened up," too; California has been "softened up"; our whole economic and social system has been under constant attack for more than a decade. And it is time that we stopped deluding ourselves, admitted the worst, and made preparations to see that it doesn't happen again—for this country, not yet through its crisis of depression, is now entering on a new crisis; a period of national emergency, in which billions will be spent for defense, and in which other billions may be wasted by power-drunk, bureaucratic officials, unless the American people refuse to be hoodwinked.

Every farmer, who has been amazed at the gradual encroachment of bureaucratic government on his

RED CROSS ASKS PATRIOTS TO AID WAR'S VICTIMS

By ALICE MOORE

Today is the day for each of us to ask himself: What does my flag mean to me? How proud of it am I? Why am I proud of it? What can I do today to help make it something to be proud of?

A flag is a symbol of a nation. By their acts the members of that nation determine what their flag shall stand for before the world and in the minds of their children.

Hanging out our flag is not in itself an act of patriotism — it is a proud privilege of which we gladly avail ourselves. True patriotism lies in so acting that it may continue to be a proud privilege.

The Red Cross flag, too, is the one for which we as citizens of the United States and of the world are responsible—the flag which stands for human brotherhood in action.

Today, in the name of both these flags, we are asked to give up a little—so little, in comparison with what we have, that in a day or a week we will not remember it—so that both will continue to tell the world that beneath their folds live the highest ideals known to man; and that Nevada City is a worthy participant of their glory.

Hang out your flag—and give to the Red Cross.

REAL BALL GAME AT CASHIN FIELD NEXT SUNDAY

Next Sunday Nevada City Lava Cappers play the undefeated Newcastle team at Cashin Field for the championship of the first half of the Foothill League series. Newcastle claims they have first place cinched but the Nevada City team does not believe it, as it has first to defeat Nevada City to claim the title, and with Alex McKenzie and Stintson for a starting battery Newcastle will have to play ball for the full nine innings.

With Mahosky and Yocum, the latter a left hander, and Livesay to help McKenzie if needed, Nevada City can show them four good pitchers as well as a good infield and outfield. Five players are hitting from 500 to 597 and should be able to hit with any team in the league. However they are not underrating Newcastle. They are a good team to defeat Auburn 6 to 3 last Sunday, and Cashin Field should have a real ball game next Sunday. If Nevada City wins they will tie with Newcastle for first place with Auburn second place.

It is stated the Grass Valleyites claim their team averages 18 years of age but plays teams of ages from 25 to 35 years. The Nevada City group wonder if they wouldn't like to have a few of those old men from 25 to 35? Nevada City has five Placer Junior College players signed on.

OLD SHEFFIELD FIRE BELL WILL PARADE ON 4TH

The old fire bell in the firehouse on Broad street was taken down out of the tower Wednesday forenoon by Nevada City firemen, Max Solaro, fire truck driver and Ed Lipke and crew from the P. G. & E. force. The firehouse is badly in need of repairs and it was feared the bell would fall. It will be used in the July Fourth parade and then placed in a tower over the new City Hall, where it will continue to call out the six o'clock morning, 12 noon and six o'clock evening hours and ring the numbers for fires.

The bell was cast in 1860 by Naylor, Vickers Company of Sheffield, England. It is numbered 1984, weighs 200 pounds, and made of cast steel. This company manufactured bells in early days but now turns out machine guns.

The bell has long been used in Nevada City as a curfew bell.

Home from San Francisco—
Mrs. Charles Genasci and daughter Miss Fay Genasci, will return home Sunday from a several day visit in San Francisco and the fair.

In these will be three legfed races, sack races, sprinting, pie eating contest, wood chopping contest, ladies wood sawing, ladies nail driving, married ladies blindfold race.

Lunch at noon, and then the greased pole, tug of war, American Legion rally at hall, carnival dance, jitter bug contest. All who attend are assured a good time.

MILITARY UNITS AT AUBURN TO WORK PROBLEM

A demonstration of military tactics in which Infantry and Artillery units of the California National Guard will participate, has been made a portion of the program at the annual 20th District Agricultural Fair in Auburn, June 30.

The Sacramento Battery of the 143rd Field Artillery and the Auburn Company of the 184th Infantry will participate in the maneuvers at fair grounds.

Using a cannon capable of discharging a 3-inch projectile, the Artillery will pave the way for an advance against a theoretical enemy position by the Infantry.

Both units scheduled to participate in the demonstrations are members of the 40th (Sunshine) Division which trained at Camp Kearney, 1917 and 1918, before participating in the closing months of the World War in 1918 in France.

The problem which the military units will work out is being prepared by Captain A. L. Predmore, commanding officer of Company E., 194 Infantry. First Lieutenant Bert A. Griffith, commanding the artillery unit, is cooperating with Captain Predmore in making the display possible at the Auburn Fair.

MOTHER AND 2 KIDDIES HURT IN CAR CRASH

Mrs. Fred Gerding and two small children while returning to their home in Alleghany Friday evening received injuries in an auto accident. As she drove around one of the sharp turns on the Downieville highway the lights of her car went out and it went over the bank, rolling 100 feet to an old road below.

Carl Baker of Nevada City was returning from Indian Flat and saw a waving flashlight down the mountainside and investigated. Mrs. Gerding was waving the light for help. He took them to Jones Memorial hospital where it was found she had suffered a broken arm. The youngest chld received several cuts. The car evidently had rolled over two or three times and was badly damaged. Mrs. Gerding will be remembered in this city as the former Miss Thelma Davies.

Industry And National Defense

This nation is embarking upon a vast program of defense to make its shores and its liberties safe against all aggressors. Of that program, our industrial system — the greatest in the world—will be the mainstay.

For that reason, it's important to know what industry has to say on this vital problem. And the Board of Directors of the National Association of Manufacturers has issued a statement regarding national defense that deserves the attention of every American.

The five main points emphasized by the N. A. M. might be listed as follows:

1. That industry has long been cooperating with the War and Navy Departments and will continue to do so with them and with the Civilian Committee appointed by the President.

2. That it will be the task of industry not only to meet the needs of our national defense program but also continue to meet those of our civilian population.

3. That procurement—the problem of specifications, purchases, inspection, and delivery—should be put in the hands of experienced civilians in the interest of both efficiency and public confidence.

4. That the problem of a skilled labor shortage can be handled if the necessary procurement orders are forthcoming promptly, and that the solution of plant expansion should be based upon a recognition by the government of the necessity for "writing off" the original investment in a reasonable length of time in order to allow for the fact that readjustment to peacetime needs will some day be necessary.

5. That an effective national defense program need not require the abandonment of any sound social legislation, but that it does mean "the removal of such legislative and administrative restrictions on industrial production as are condemned by military and industrial experience."

These signposts described by industry show the sound way to national defense and American security. Surely they represent a sensible approach which experts and the general public can join in applauding.—Contributed.

Just Wonderin'

I wonder about sheep and men
And curious things they do,
Of course I never think these thoughts
About myself and you;
But when a big bell-wether moves,
If he be man or sheep,
The flock will follow at his heels
And ape his every leap.

I wonder if you have ever noticed to what an extent people—present company excepted, resemble sheep. This is not an ungracious suggestion, for many humans and animals possess characteristics in common.

There is, we all know, the lion hearted man, who, if his lion heartedness fails of recognition, rises up majestically and roars about it with all his might and main.

We have all met foxy men and catty women, piggish individuals and bear like souls; then there is the wolf man, destructive, and ruthless, of whom we have at least one outstanding example in the world of today. But let's get back to sheep.

The old bell-wether, whether man or ram, gets his following and it is a blindly obedient one. He may lead his flock through barbed wire and brambles, across green meadows or up the rugged steep, through barbed wire fences or over stone walls, but he is followed without a protesting bleat.

With the human bell-wether and his sheep-like flock, it is the same. Should we not beware? In this day of strange isms and ideologies, why not ask ourselves if we are afflicted with the sheep mind and rushing pell-mell after some one or some thing before we have examined the pathway by the light of reason and the torch of informed human understanding.

I wonder why it is that the bankrupter a nation becomes, the more money it has for the equipment of vast armies, the construction of hideous war machines and the waging of ruthless battles.

I wonder if Europe isn't doing very well without the American tourist; oh well, Mr. and Mrs. American tourist, if you are debarred from the delights of European travel, you can at least see America and get acquainted with our Latin American neighbors to the south.

Uncle Silas says: "No sooner do I learn to pronounce the names of foreign leaders and officials, than the deck is shuffled and up comes a new list of names to work on."—

FORDYCE LAKE ROAD REPAIRED

Fishermen travelling to and from Fordyce last season who complained at the size of the waterbreaks on the newly reconditioned road to that lake, may well thank those same obstructions for these being any road left at all this spring, according to District Ranger John R. Hodgson at the Big Bend ranger station. Hodgson states that a considerable amount of the surfacing put on by the forest service last year was washed off and some of the dips badly damaged but that practically all of the surfacing would have been lost had it not been for them. Culverts that have not clogged in five years were filled by the flood, causing the water to run down the road. Hodgson is using several men available on his regular improvement crew in making the road passable but complete repair depends upon any emergency flood repair money that might be appropriated by congress.

The defendants demurrer to the complaint was overruled and the defendant given 15 days to answer. A motion to strike out portions of the complaint were denied as were requests for permission to make further surveys in the underground property of the Pennsylvania mine.

DEMPSEY RANCH HOUSE IN ASHES

The home on the Dempsey ranch near Smartville, owned by Coughlan Brothers, of Columbia Hill, was burned to the ground Friday and two tons of hay were also destroyed before the fire was extinguished. The fire started in the attic and when discovered was too far along to be put out with facilities at hand. One of the men on the ranch ran into the house and called a state fire guard stationed at Smartville and he rushed to the blaze but could only assist in keeping the fire from spreading to the nearby hay fields where hay was shocked or to other buildings on the property.

All the contents of the house were burned except two or three beds and clothes on the men's backs. At the ranch at the time the fire started were James Coughlan, and nephew, Charles Coughlan, Walter Scadden, Frank Davies and Mike Coughlan. All the men received burns in trying to extinguish the fire. When Davies discovered he could do no more at the house he drove his car away from near the burning building to a place of safety. As he turned back he put out two or three cinder fires one having a good start in a nearby haystack and also saved a chicken house. The loss is $3,000 with small insurance.

VIGILANT WATCH

business—who has been irked by the constanly mounting restrictions of government bureaus and departments—needs to pause now, and take account of stock. Strong nations, like the United States, are not overthrown in a day, nor a month, nor year; they are slowly gutted and emasculated. A bit of liberty is clipped off here—for a promise of greater security there; a new tax is levied on top of other taxes, usually in the name of an emergency; then another tax, and another—and finally, perhaps, the farmer finds himself regimented, not by foreign dictator, but by his constant caller, the tax collector.

There is no disposition on the part of this writer to decry or oppose the war taxes, or preparedness taxes, which are well in their way to enactment. This country must take out insurance against Europe's firebrands—adequate insurance. That, undoubtedly, means sacrifice. And California and the nation are prepared for sacrifice.

But the economic depression, which started in 1929, and which still endures, has been used as an excuse for the most unbridled, unwarranted era of governmental extravagance in America's history. Because farmers and business men, home owners and workers, were stirred by the plight of their less fortunate countrymen, and were willing to give until it hurt, conscinceless politicians played politics with human misery and spent money like drunken sailors — at a ratio of ten cents for the needy, and 90 cents for the greedy. And the present threat of war—the present admitted need for national preparedness—may again be used as an excuse for a new period of squandermania and governmental usurpation of the rights and privileges of the individual, unless the people who still believe in liberty think enough of it to crack down on every bureaucrat who seeks to abridge it. That is the reason for this series of articles, and in succeeding columns we hope to point out the dangers on the horizon.
